‘Cursed Fires That Burn Forever’ is a commission work from Kiki Mora. Kiki Mora is a musical project that defies easy categorisation. Drawing inspiration from a variety of genres, including Black Metal, Jazz, and Rock, the band creates a unique sound that is both atmospheric and aggressive, raw and unkempt. With a focus on exploring the darker corners of the human experience, Kiki Mora's music is characterised by juxtaposing lyrical melodies, unconventional harmonies, and evocative sound effects, screams and incantations. Aesthetically, the band's creative vision is rooted in surrealism, with a preference for abstract imagery and unconventional arrangements. As such, their work often explores themes of dreams, nightmares, and the subconscious, using music as a means of tapping into the collective unconscious and channeling primal energies into sonic form. Ultimately, Kiki Mora is a project that seeks to explore the boundaries of what is possible as a guitar trio, evoking new sounds and ideas with a fearless sense of experimentation and a boundless creative spirit.

Inspired by the surreal and the occult, my design elements include magical flames, the sun, moon, stars, smoke, men with axes, burning candles, tombstones, etc. I hope to create the atmosphere of a cursed flame that can't stop burning in the apocalypse. I created a CD and tape cover for Kiki Mora, which were each released as a limited edition of 100 copies.
